Executive Director Scoop

With fall now upon us, we are beginning to experience welcomed changes in the weather, scenes, and scents. All of this has brought back cherished memories of my time as a William & Mary and Mason School student here in Williamsburg over 15 years ago. While I recognize that moment is much different from today, a notable constant has been the caliber of the student. I have witnessed how students today have taken an even more proactive approach to their education and desired careers during this unprecedented time, if even in a virtual setting. To illustrate, we recently ended the From DoG to Wall event that once again brought together accomplished alumni and William & Mary students to explore the financial services industry and understand how students can best position themselves for success. This year the event was offered through 10 virtual panels over the course of a month, twice a week. The high levels of student participation was impressive, especially given competing classroom and related demands. Moreover, students came prepared dressed in professional attire, with Zoom cameras mostly turned on, seeking answers to ready questions. Each evening, I left the panels encouraged, and once again reminded that today's students are more than equal to the challenges presently confronting them.

Congratulations to our 2020 WIN Conference Stock Pitch Team!

This team of undergraduate students took second place at the annual WIN Conference Stock Pitch. The Undergraduate Women in Investing Conference, hosted by Cornell University, is designed to educate undergraduate students about the rewarding career opportunities available to women in investment management, a field in which women are vastly underrepresented.

We would like to thank Tom Zeni and Bob McNew for support and guidance. They contributed so much of their time and offered invaluable suggestions and feedback each meeting. We would also like to thank Nancy Turner and the Executive Partners for all of their support.

DoG to Wall: Huge Success

As you may know, we held DoG to Wall as a virtual panel series spanning over 6 weeks, and it was a wonderful success. Finance Academy did a tremendous job of selecting alumni, promoting to fellow students, and designing panel questions. We were able to host an amazing keynote with Matt Siano, facilitate 10 panels with 38 Alumni panelists, and maintain an average of 40 student participants per panel session over the course of 6 weeks. Thanks to our fantastic alumni, we were able to cover a variety of industries: Investment Banking, Asset Management & Endowments, Risk Management, Private Equity, Sales & Trading, Corporate Finance, Alternative Assets, Early Career Success, Strategy Consulting, and Private Banking & Wealth Management.

Student Testimonial: "Thank you for orchestrating and helping put together the DoG Street to Wall Street Panel series this year. I'm a sophomore planning to major in Finance and the four or five panels I attended were very helpful, especially this last PE one and the Investment Banking panel. I now have a better idea of what I want to do with my career because the panelists were so great. Thanks again for working on D2W, I know it must have taken a lot of behind-the-scenes work."
