Congratulations from the Boehly Center transferred to William and Mary, I had no internship or work experience and I knew very little about the hiring process. I walked into the Boehly Center, and they were ready to help. They were extremely helpful in starting my job search and helping me throughout the whole process, and with their help it led to multiple job offers. A few things that they were able to do along the way include resume support, networking sessions with alumni and mock interviews. Additionally, I got the opportunity to take the Hedge Fund Management course which is one of the Boehly Center special classes taught by an industry professional. I also attended numerous seminars offered through the Boehly Center like Training the Street and DoG Street to Wall Street. I am extremely grateful for the services offered at the Boehly center and their amazing staff!

New Finance Electives (Fall 2022)

Behavioral Finance (BUAD 428 | CRN 17048)
Taught by Professor Bill Skimmyhorn, this new 3-credit course is open to all interested business school students. The course leverages research and methods from psychology, economics and finance to better understand how we “should” make decisions as well as how we typically make them. Students will tackle topics from intertemporal choice to social preferences, efficient markets to biases and heuristics, and investing to forecasting. The course should be of interest to all finance majors/minors, any economics majors/minors also studying business, students interested in “behavioral” analysis, and anyone who wants to learn to make better decisions. Together, we'll play games, make mistakes, and (hopefully) learn to do better.

Green Energy Finance Course (BUAD 492 08 | CRN: 17290)
Taught by Manfred Ernst, this course will be an introduction to capital investing principles and financial decision-making taking into account global climate concerns and economic, social, and corporate governance values of stakeholders in today’s world. The course will also focus on how project finance credit structures present an option to finance renewable energy generation and infrastructure.
